ALBANY — In the wake of a report showing the difficulties for average fans to buy concert and sports tickets at face value, two state senators are calling for a legislative hearing into the matter."

Sens. Daniel Squadron and Brad Hoylman, both Manhattan Democrats, fired off a letter to Sen. Andrew Lanza, the Staten Island Republican who chairs the Senate Investigations and Government Operations Committee, calling for an oversight hearing to “ensure that the Legislature does not again blindly renew a law that benefits very few at the cost of so many.”

The state’s ticket-selling laws are set to expire May 14.”
