Chris Gigante, President of Feel Better Kids recently honored Senator Owen H. Johnson with an award for his outstanding support to disabled children.

Feel Better Kids is a not-for-profit children's charity whose primary mission is to help children who are terminally ill or disabled. For the past nine years, Feel Better Kids has helped hundreds of children suffering from debilitating illnesses lead a better quality of life. With the growing number of unemployed and underinsured families, FBK is a beacon of hope for many families that have no place to turn.

They provide children from low to moderate-income families, suffering from debilitation illnesses, the vital medical resources “not covered” by state programs and private insurance. These resources include physical therapy to improve their motor and cognitive skills, specialized medical equipment to improve their mobility, pharmaceutical goods, transportation to and from medical visits, vaccines, and additional office visits which their families are unable to afford.
