Brooklyn - State Senator Martin J. Golden (R-C-I, Brooklyn) today issued comments on NAVY Seal Team 6, responsible for hunting and killing Osama Bin Laden, highlighting his recognition of the Unit at a ceremony held in Brooklyn in May 2007, for their honorable military service through their support of the Global War on Terror.

Senator Golden, at that time, joined the New York State Police in honoring and paying tribute to the United States Naval Special Warfare Development Group, known as SEAL Team Six, for their valiant military service during Operation Iraqi Freedom.

“It was truly an honor for New York to welcome the distinguished members of this Naval Group to Brooklyn in 2007 so to thank them for all they have done to keep us and the world safe from terrorism. We are grateful for their bravery and willingness to defend our freedoms and engage in counter-terrorism operations worldwide.

Now, almost four years later, I add additional praise and commend the men and women who now are even greater heroes of freedom. The citizens of New York City and State, the United States of America, and of nations throughout the world, applaud them for the successful assassination mission of Osama Bin Laden.

Some of the same Navy Seals stood just miles from Ground Zero the day I honored them, and now, they have brought justice in the names of all the lives lost on the morning of September 11, 2001.”
