Senator Carlucci Exposes Loan Modification Company Targeting Struggling Spring Valley Homeowners

February 7, 2012 – As mortgage abuse continues to skyrocket in the midst of the worst foreclosure crisis in history, Senator David Carlucci (D-Rockland/Orange) on Thursday will join Spring Valley homeowners Rosemarie Jean-Baptiste and Maxene Sainvil, the recent target of a ploy by a loan modification company that promised to adjust their home mortgage payments in return for upfront cash payments of $600 per month for 3 years. The company, Loan Modification Division, using deceiving images disguised as government seals, also failed to disclose a disclaimer that such services were provided free of charge by the State, as required by law.

Under New York State law, companies like Loan Modification Division are 1) prohibited from taking any up front fees in connection for activities related to modifying mortgages, and 2) require these companies to provide a disclaimer and information about the availability of free state-funded services in their advertisements.

With the onset of the subprime lending crisis, the nationwide jump in foreclosures and mortgage defaults has triggered a sharp rise in the number of predatory scams targeting financially-strapped homeowners. In the case of Ms. Baptiste and Mr. Sainvil, the couple, living on a limited income while supporting their four children and family relatives in Haiti, currently face the prospect of foreclosure.
