Good Samaritan Hospital Partnered With NY Senator Johnson for Lifesaving Blood Drive

OWEN H. JOHNSON   March 6, 2012

| ISSUE: HEALTH

Good Samaritan Hospital partnered with Senator Owen H. Johnson for a lifesaving blood drive collecting 221 pints of blood on February 27, 2012. The blood drive took place at Good Samaritan Hospital in West Islip, from 6:00 AM until 9:00 PM, with two New York Blood Center mobile units were available in the hospital's front and rear parking lots for the convenience of donors.

"I would like to thank each individual who took a few minutes out of their busy schedule to come to Good Samaritan Hospital to donate the gift of life," Senator Johnson said. "Each person who donated blood today could potentially help save up to three lives. Thank you for supporting such an important cause."

Photo caption: Senator Owen H. Johnson thanks Richard Brooks for donating blood at the Good Samaritan Blood Drive on February 27, 2012. Mr. Brooks is an employee in Imaging Services at Good Samaritan and a frequent donor.