Albany, NY – Yesterday afternoon, New York State Governor Andrew M. Cuomo signed into law State Senator Brad Hoylman's (D -Manhattan) and State Assembly Health Committee Chair Dick Gottfried's (D-Manhattan) legislation which directs the New York State Commissioner of Health to conduct a study of the provision of services at urgent care centers, mini clinics operating within pharmacies and other health care delivery models not presently required to undergo the state Certificate of Need process nor required to obtain authorization to conduct office based surgery.

"After St. Vincent's Hospital closed in 2010, my constituents were bombarded with marketing for urgent care centers," said New York State Senator Brad Hoylman (D, WFP – Manhattan). "In fact, shortages of hospitals, emergency rooms and primary care physicians have led to a proliferation of new health care service delivery models across the state. But regulations on urgent care centers, mini clinics in pharmacies and the like are lacking and vague. Furthermore, inconsistencies in the health care services these models provide leave consumers confused about when to use such facilities."

of America regarding the disparate services urgent care centers provide. The white paper stated, “The majority of urgent care centers provide services in episodic primary care, occupational medicine, routine immunizations and school physicals, and at least half of them also provide lab tests, x-rays, fracture and laceration care, and intravenous fluids.”

The study mandated by the new law will examine the impact or impacts of the respective new health care models on the delivery, quality and cost of health care in the communities and regions in which they are found. “There is a clear public benefit in a Department of Health study that will both inform consumers and establish any need for further regulatory action,” said Senator Hoylman, who acknowledged the guidance of Senator Kemp Hannon in drafting the legislation. “I’m thankful to my friend and colleague Assembly Member Gottfried for securing passage of the bill in the Assembly, and to Governor Cuomo for signing it into law.”
