More than 300 people attended State Senator Patty Ritchie's annual Oswego County Job Fair, held Wednesday at the Fulton War Memorial.

"I want to get Central New York and the North Country back to work, and connecting job seekers with employers through my annual job fairs is an important part of that effort, along with steps I'm taking in Albany to lower taxes and create a better business and job-creating environment in New York State," Senator Ritchie said.

Those in attendance were able to meet with nearly 50 employers--and at least 100 jobs were available to be filled right away.
