Message from Liz . . .

Every year, starting around Thanksgiving going through New Year's Day, many of us re-visit the age old questions of thinking about how things have gone during the last year. Have we accomplished our personal goals? Where are we compared to a year ago? What are we thankful for? What will be our resolutions for the New Year? And what is our shared responsibility for improving our community and the lives of others?

There are plenty of different ways to answer. I am reminded of why I got involved in public service work nearly 30 years ago. Much of my career has been invested in efforts to alleviate hunger, through my work with Food Banks and other fine anti-poverty organizations. Unfortunately, 30 years later, our public policy failures combined with a serious economic downturn has resulted in a growing hunger crisis here in our City and throughout our Country. The Food Bank for NYC (www.foodbanknyc.org), an organization I am proud to have helped found back in 1983, explains the current NYC reality this way:

“Hunger is caused by food poverty, or a lack of geographic and financial access to nutritious food. In New York City, one of the richest cities in the world, food poverty is around every corner. Throughout the five boroughs, approximately 1.4 million people — mainly women, children, seniors, the working poor and people with disabilities — rely on soup kitchens and food pantries. Approximately 3.3 million New Yorkers experience difficulty affording food for themselves and their families, an increase of 60 percent since 2003.

Financial pressures such as unemployment, health issues, health insurance issues and low wages continue to strain the budgets New Yorkers with low to moderate incomes. Low-income New Yorkers often have to choose between providing enough food for themselves or their families and paying the month's rent or utility bills. Middle-income New Yorkers are also feeling the pressure, reporting increasingly difficulty affording groceries. With food prices steadily rising, struggling New Yorkers' ability to buy food for themselves and their families is at a crisis level.

To make matters worse, more than 3 million New Yorkers live in low-income neighborhoods that lack access to affordable, nutritious food. With their budgets already strained, and the prevalence of low-cost, low-quality food in these neighborhoods, these residents face significant challenges in leading a healthy lifestyle — leading to high concentrations of diet-related conditions such as diabetes, obesity and hypertension.”

There are many wonderful charitable organizations throughout our great City, and I don't mean to tell you which are the most deserving of assistance. But, I do hope that during this end of year season of reflection, that if you are able to help others, you will think about how to help neighbors most in need of the basic necessities of life: food, shelter and hope for the future.

Happy Holidays to you and your family!

Bus Lane Camera Enforcement Has Started:

In late November, the New York City Department of Transportation began bus lane camera enforcement of the new Select Bus Service bus lanes along First and Second Avenues. The new cameras were recently authorized by New York State, and I was a strong advocate for this critical new enforcement measure, which will result in more efficient bus service along the M15 line. Drivers must stay out of an active bus lane except to make the next available right turn or quickly drop off or pick up passengers. If you drive, park, or stand in a bus lane during hours of operation you face fines ranging from $115 to $150. In addition to the cameras, NYPD regularly patrols bus lanes and issues violations for bus lane infractions. MTA New York City Transit also enforces the bus lane rules.

Free Mediation Services:

Safe Horizon Mediation Program offers mediation and conflict resolution services and training to the New York City community. Mediation is a process that allows individuals or institutions involved in a dispute to meet voluntarily in a safe environment and discuss the issues dividing them. A mediator facilitates the discussion in a neutral and confidential manner to help people better understand the situation and reach mutually agreed-upon solutions. Issues can range from conflicts with neighbors or landlords to financial/debt issues to workplace conflicts. There is no cost to mediation and setting up an appointment is quick and simple, with convenient hours and accessible locations. For more information, call or visit the Manhattan Mediation Center at 346 Broadway, Room 400W (Visitors' Entrance at 108 Leonard Street), (212) 577-1740 or e-mail mediation@safehorizon.org.

Heat Season Rules:

The City Housing Maintenance Code and Multiple Dwelling Law requires building owners to provide heat and hot water to all tenants. Building owners are required to provide hot water 365 days per year at a constant minimum temperature of 120 degrees Fahrenheit. Between October 1st and May 31st, a period designated as "Heat Season," building owners are also required to provide tenants with heat under the following conditions:

- Between the hours of 6AM and 10PM, if the outside temperature falls below 55 degrees, the inside temperature is required to be at least 68 degrees Fahrenheit.
- Between the hours of 10PM and 6AM, if the temperature outside falls below 40 degrees, the inside temperature is required to be at least 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

Tenants who are cold in their apartments should first attempt to notify the building owner, managing agent or superintendent. If heat is not restored, the tenant should call the City's Citizen Service Center at 311. For the hearing impaired, the TTY number is (212) 504-4115. The Center is open 24-hours a day, seven-days a week.

Fair Pay Enforcement

During the special legislative session last month, the Wage Theft Prevention Act (WTPA) (S8380/A11726) was approved by the Assembly. Since this legislation had already passed the Senate, it now goes to the Governor, who is expected to sign it. This legislation will protect thousands of hard-working men and women from unscrupulous employers who steal their earnings by paying less than minimum wage, misclassifying them as independent contractors, forcing them to work off the clock and various other schemes. This important legislation will increase penalties and strengthen enforcement of laws protecting workers from nonpayment and underpayment of wages.

Every day countless workers across the State face rampant abuse on the job. Recent studies have found that a large number of employees are illegally earning less than minimum wage, while others are being paid less than their agreed upon wage. Additionally, employees often do not receive the overtime pay they earn, and are left in the dark regarding their employers' methods for calculating wages and benefits.

The National Employment Law Project estimates that more than $1 billion is stolen annually from NYC workers by unscrupulous employers. Advocates project that the WTPA would bring in approximately $50 million in increased savings and revenues to help State government save valuable programs currently threatened by the fiscal crisis.

Under current law, there is little penalty for employers who violate wage requirements. Penalties for wage theft are so low that there is, in fact, a financial incentive to simply steal workers' wages. Responsible businesses can't compete when law-breaking employers are driving down pay rates.

The Wage Theft Prevention Act will increase penalties, increase protection of workers who speak up, as well as add additional enforcement tools that the Department of Labor and Courts can use to investigate cases and collect the money that workers are owed.
