The Associated General Contractors of New York State is now accepting applications for their undergraduate, graduate and diesel technology scholarship program. The deadline to submit applications is May 15, 2012.

AGC is offering two $1,500 annual scholarships for students studying Diesel Technology.

Applicants must be entering their sophomore, junior or senior year in a two- or four-year college, be pursuing a Bachelor or Associate degree in construction technology, management or civil engineering and committed to a career in the building or highway construction trades.

Students can reapply each year for up to three years of undergraduate study.

Since 1998 the program has awarded nearly $1 million in 448 scholarships to students pursuing Civil Engineering, Construction Technology, Construction Management and Diesel Technology.
