SOUTH SALEM, NY - Seventeen area libraries are the beneficiaries of $80,000 in discretionary "bullet aid" grant funding. The grants were procured and announced by State Senator Terrence Murphy.

"Literacy is perhaps the most beautiful gift you can give," Senator Murphy said. "Benjamin Franklin said 'either write something worth reading, or do something worth writing,' and I hope today we've done something worthwhile that can help everyone in the community from children, teens, adults and seniors benefit from the programs in their local library.

Earlier this year, Senator Murphy announced more than $25,000 in construction grants for local public libraries in the 40th Senate District. The Lewisboro Library, Brewster Public Library and the Beekman Library in Hopewell Junction have all received state grants to upgrade their individual facilities.

Cindy Rubino, director of the Lewisboro Library said, "We are extraordinarily grateful to Senator Terrence Murphy for his strong advocacy on behalf of area libraries. This funding goes toward defraying the cost of the valuable programs and services libraries provide, and is much needed. We thank Senator Murphy for these grants and commend his unprecedented transparency."

Funding from these grants will be used for program support, an emergency generator, computer equipment like 3D printers and other library functions. The libraries that will benefit include:

Dutchess County

- Pawling Free Library. $5,000
- Beekman Library. $2,500

Putnam County

- Mahopac Public Library. $10,000
- Brewster Public Library. $7,500
- Reed Memorial Library. $5,000
- Patterson Library. $2,500

- Chappaqua School District Library. $5,000
- Hendrick Hudson Free Library. $5,000
- Lewisboro Library. $5,000

- Croton Free Library. $2,500
- Pound Ridge Library District. $2,500
- Ruth Keeler Memorial Library. $2,500

The extra funding was distributed based on need, itemized and made public for total transparency, Murphy said.
