

NEW YORK STATE SENATOR

William Larkin

Larkin: Senate Budget A Roadmap To A More Prosperous NY

WILLIAM LARKIN March 16, 2016

Senator Bill Larkin (R-39th District) is calling New York State Senate's 2016-17 budget a roadmap to a more prosperous New York and represents a continuation of Senator Larkin and his colleagues commitment to enact a responsible and on-time spending plan that will help make New York a more affordable place to live, work, and raise a family. The proposal restrains state spending, provides significant new tax savings for hardworking middle-class taxpayers, and invests in the shared priorities of New Yorkers and their families.

RESTORING FISCAL DISCIPLINE

"The crisis of unaffordability has plagued New York residents for far too long and while we have made strides in recent years to address this issue, more can and must be done," said Senator Larkin. "By reigning in state spending, making the property tax cap permanent and providing a 25 percent income tax cut for middle class families, we can lay the foundation of a more affordable and prosperous Hudson Valley."

Capping State Spending:

The Senate budget proposal stays within the self-imposed two-percent spending cap, and advances a proposal to pass a Constitutional amendment to permanently require this budgeting restraint going forward.

Two-Thirds Majority for New Tax Increases:

The Senate budget proposal includes legislation that would make it more difficult to increase the burden on taxpayers by creating a Constitutional amendment requiring a two-thirds majority vote for any new tax increase.

PROVIDING REAL TAX RELIEF

Cutting Middle Class Tax Rates to the Lowest Level in 70 Years:

The highlight of the Senate Republicans' budget is the new Middle Class Income Tax Relief Program that establishes the lowest middle class tax rate in more than 70 years. Starting in 2018, a total of 5 million eligible taxpayers – including more than 770,000 small businesses who file under the Personal Income Tax (PIT) – would begin to see savings. When fully implemented in 2025, middle class New Yorkers will pay a 25 percent lower tax rate and save $3.5 billion in taxes each year.

Right now, existing middle class tax cuts are set to expire in 2018 and the tax rate will jump to 6.85 percent. This would result in an annual cost of $155 on average to middle class taxpayers, totaling $700 million per year. The Senate Majority's plan not only eliminates this expected middle class tax increase but goes even further to a phased-in 25 percent tax rate reduction to 5.14 percent when fully effective. This permanent rate cut saves middle class taxpayers an average of $897, for a total of $3.5 billion per year in 2025 and thereafter.

Taxpayers eligible for the savings include: single filers with taxable income between $20,000 and $150,000; heads of households with taxable income between $30,000 and $225,000; and married joint filers with taxable income between $40,000 and $300,000. The proposal prevents the existing middle class tax cuts from expiring in 2018 and then begins a rate reduction in 2019 that will be phased down each year over seven years. It would also continue the current indexing of income brackets on a permanent basis.

Increasing Small Business Income Tax Exemptions:

The Senate's budget tax cut plan will expand small business tax cuts that were enacted in 2013 to provide even more tax relief to help entrepreneurs grow and create jobs. The Senate Republican Majority successfully advocated for the inclusion of a Personal Income Tax (PIT) exemption for small businesses and small farms in the 2013 budget and this year, eligibility to receive the tax savings would be significantly expanded. When fully enacted, small businesses and small farms would save $494 million annually.

The proposal expands the eligibility of a small business to include any business that files under PIT regardless of how the business is structured; raises the income eligibility threshold from $250,000 to $500,000 when the business entity income is less than $1.5 million; eliminates the employee requirement; increases the exemption from 5 percent to 15 percent for small business income and from 5 percent to 20 percent for farm income; and reduces the corporate business income rate for small businesses with incomes less than $500,000 from 6.5 percent to 2.5 percent over two years.

Fully Eliminating the 18-a Utility Tax Surcharge:

The Senate's budget proposal would permanently eliminate the 18-a surcharge by the end of 2016 and save taxpayers $125 million. In 2009, the Democrats enacted a utility tax surcharge over the objections of Senate Republican and it cost ratepayers nearly $600 million annually. In 2013, the Senate Republicans successfully fought for a phase-out of the assessment, saving ratepayers $455 million over the five-year phase-out period. In 2014, the Enacted Budget contained an additional $600 million in savings over the remaining phase-out, which is scheduled to be completed by the end of 2017.

STAR:

The School Tax Relief (STAR) program is a longstanding Senate priority that provides significant savings for taxpayers each year. The Senate rejects the Executive Budget proposal to cap STAR at 2015-16 levels and provides $56 million in additional STAR benefits to fully fund the school property tax exemptions this fall.

The Senate proposal also makes the STAR rebate checks permanent.

Property Tax Cap:

The property tax cap was enacted in 2011 due to Senate Republican efforts to reduce New Yorkers' tax burden. The cap limits the annual growth of property taxes levied by local governments and school districts to two percent or the rate of inflation, whichever is less. Since 2012, the vast majority of all school districts and municipalities have kept spending increases below the cap, leading to significant property tax savings for residents and businesses.

Taxpayers have saved $7.6 billion over the past three years as a result of the property tax cap. School tax levies have risen by an average of just 2.2 percent annually -- the lowest average growth for any comparable period in New York since 1982.

Last year, the Senate successfully sought to have the tax cap extended for five years, and this year, the Senate budget proposal goes one step further, making it permanent and bringing further certainty to taxpayers and businesses.

Saving on Estate Taxes to Help Future Generations of Business Owners:

To encourage small businesses and farms to pass down their business from one generation to the next, the Senate is proposing to speed up the full phase-in of estate tax reform first enacted in 2014. This will allow estates to have a tax exclusion amount equal to the federal exclusion amount when the estate has farm operations or small business property and where the value of the farm operations or small business are a majority of the estate.

Starting April 1, 2016, the exclusion would be increased to $5.45 million, resulting in an annual savings of $70 million and a $210 million cumulative savings by 2020.

RECORD LEVEL OF FUNDING TO SCHOOLS

“One of the first bills that the Senate passed this year was to fully eliminate the Gap Elimination Adjustment (GEA) education cuts. We did this to send a clear message that we intend to lead the fight to increase investment in our local schools and our children's future,” said Larkin. “Eliminating the GEA cuts will mean more resources for classroom instruction and quality programs -- helping to ensure an outstanding education for every child in every school throughout New York State.”

Ends The GEA in 2016:

The Senate budget restores the remaining $434 million in Gap Elimination Adjustment (GEA) cuts for schools in 2016-17 and permanently eliminates these harmful education budget reductions. The GEA was first imposed on New Yorkers in 2010 by former Governor David Paterson and the Democrats who controlled the Senate and Assembly. The entire Senate Republican Conference voted against the GEA because it created severe cuts to the bottom lines for public schools.

Since it was first approved, Senate Republicans have been leading the charge to abolish the GEA and deliver major funding increases to help mitigate its impact on education. In the past five years, the GEA cuts have been reduced by approximately 85 percent to $434 million in the 2015-16 budget. Last year alone, the Senate Republicans successfully negotiated an additional $603 million to help schools overcome the GEA challenge created by Democrats and helped restore millions of dollars in state aid to schools.

Provides Record Education Funding for Schools:

The Senate budget proposal includes a year-to-year 7.15 percent school aid increase of $1.655 billion. The $24.8 billion education proposal would provide a record amount of education funding, with highlights including:

- An $880 million increase in Foundation Aid over 2015-16;
- Full funding of $341.9 million in Expense Base Aids;
- A $1.3 billion - 8.3 percent - increase in total operating support;
- An additional $27.4 million for grants in aid to Charter schools;
- An additional $10 million for the Library Construction Fund;
- An increase of $5 million in Library aid;
- Provides $4.6 million in new nonpublic school aid, in addition to $2.6 million included in the Executive Budget; and
- An additional $4.1 million for 4201 schools for the blind and the deaf.

MAKING COLLEGE MORE AFFORDABLE

“The cost of earning a college degree has skyrocketed in recent years, making the goal of earning one’s diploma unreachable for some and a costly expense for many others. We must continue to work at making college more affordable for working families to ensure that they have the ability to get ahead in life without mountains of student loan debt,” said Senator Larkin. “The proposals in the Senate’s budget are an important step at making sure college is more affordable and accessible to the sons and daughters of New York’s hardworking middle- class families.”

Rejects the Use of Taxpayer Dollars to Fund College Tuition for Illegal Immigrants:

The Senate rejected an Executive Budget proposal that would cost state taxpayers $27 million and reward people who are here illegally by giving them free college tuition. The measure would have extended all other criteria, exemptions or opportunities found within the education law - including all scholarship and tuition assistance programs funded with state tax dollars - to illegal immigrants while hardworking middle-class families are already being forced to take out massive college loans to pay for higher education.

$87 Million TAP Increase:

The Senate’s proposal focuses on reducing college costs and includes a significant increase in support for the Tuition Assistance Program (TAP). The Senate budget increases income eligibility and TAP awards so that more middle class families can receive help with higher education expenses. When fully implemented in fall 2017, the Senate proposal will provide $87 million in additional TAP awards, with a guarantee of $1,000 to any student from a family with a net taxable income of less than $100,000 - up from $80,000. The increase is over two years, with $38 million in additional TAP awards starting in fall 2016 and $49 million in fall 2017.

New Tax Exemption to Save $40 Million on Student Loan Payments:

The Senate budget proposal creates a new state income tax exemption for student loan interest, saving eligible New Yorkers a total of $40 million. Similar to the exemption already authorized by the federal government to reduce taxpayers' gross income, the state would allow individuals to reduce their adjusted gross income by up to $2,500. The limit on modified adjusted gross income is $160,000 if married filing a joint return; and $80,000 if single, head of household, or qualifying widow(er).

$255 Million Tuition Tax Credit Increase:

The Senate increases the amount of the Tuition Tax Credit to save students and their families a total of $55 million in the first year, and $255 million when fully implemented in 2022. The measure doubles the amount of qualified college expenses that can be claimed from $10,000 to $20,000 over five years; doubles the maximum amount of the credit allowed from $400 to $800 over five years; and indexes the qualified expenses and credit to the rate of inflation of the Higher Education Price Index (HEPI).

Legislation to Increase Transparency of Private College Data:

While tuition and other cost controls continue to be implemented at New York's public colleges and universities, private college costs continue to skyrocket. To better assess the impact these costs are having on students and the college market as a whole, the Senate budget proposes legislation that increases accountability at New York State's private colleges and provides more transparency in the higher education marketplace.

ENSURING FAIRNESS IN TRANSPORTATION FUNDING

"Increasing funding for Hudson Valley transportation projects is vital to the safety and maintenance of the region's roads and bridges," said Senator Larkin. "Greater transportation parity will lead to healthy investments in local infrastructure projects, which will help foster economic growth and create jobs.”

Transportation Parity:

In a major victory for fairness and for job creation, the Senate proposal reestablishes parity in infrastructure funding for highways, roads, and bridges between upstate and downstate.

Transit Aid: The Senate adds an additional $6.5 million for a total of more than $200 million in Upstate transit operating aid. This provides the same 6.1 percent increase in operating assistance the non-MTA Downstate transit systems received in the Executive Budget.

DOT Capital Plan: The Senate also includes $3.5 billion in funding above the Executive budget proposal for the Department of Transportation (DOT) Capital Plan, bringing the total five-year funding to $23.6 billion. The Senate also includes legislation as part of the budget that requires the submission of a proposed five-year DOT Capital Plan that includes a requirement for a signed Memorandum of Understanding that lists capital projects, funding, and cost estimates to ensure regional balance in the plan.

ADDRESSING CRITICAL HEALTH CARE NEEDS

“Every time I read the obituaries and see another heroin death, my heart breaks—it breaks for the family and for the lost promise and potential of that almost always far too young individual,” said Senator Larkin. “The heroin crisis that has touched every region of the state and has impacted countless families throughout the Hudson Valley must be addressed head on with all the resources and energy that the state and local officials can muster.”

The Senate budget invests in critical health care programs for New Yorkers and their families, including approval of the proposed breast cancer screening initiative. It also restores $1.37 million for essential women's health initiatives, $1 million for recommendations of the Senate's Lyme and Tick-Borne Disease Task Force, and $1 million to support organ donation efforts across the state, among other health program funding.

Heroin Prevention, Treatment, and Recovery:

To help address the growth in heroin and opioid abuse in communities throughout the state, the Senate budget includes a total of $167 million to strengthen prevention, treatment, recovery, and education services. This includes an increase of more than 18 percent above the Executive Budget proposal, with the additional $26 million going to support:

- $10 million for transitional housing for individuals in recovery, with 25 percent of these funds to be used for individuals ages 15-24;
- $6.5 million for additional recovery services;
- $3.85 million for 11 additional Recovery Community Centers. The Executive Budget proposed to expand the number of Recovery Community Centers in the state by six, from the current number of three to a total of nine. The Senate proposal would bring the total to 20, and would require that all centers be distributed on a geographically even basis;
- $2 million for school prevention efforts;
- $2 million for Recovery Coaches;
- $1 million for an additional 10 Family Support Navigators, who will assist New Yorkers and their families with navigating insurance and treatment systems. The Executive Budget proposes 10 Navigators to be regionally distributed statewide and the Senate proposal doubles that commitment to 20, helping to ensure their services would be distributed on a geographically even basis;

- $450,000 for opioid drug addiction, prevention and treatment programs; and
- $200,000 for Family Support Navigator training.

The Senate is also proposing the inclusion of S6962, a bill sponsored by Senator Kemp Hannon (R, Nassau County), to prevent the abuse of opioid prescriptions through the use of FDA-approved abuse-deterrent drugs.

Preventing Domestic Violence:

The Senate budget establishes a domestic violence offender registry to help combat and root out the scourge of domestic violence across the state - - preventing abusers from doing more harm and protecting innocent women.

GROWING NEW YORK'S FARMS

“Planting Seeds is a comprehensive package of legislative initiatives that will boost the state’s farming, agri-tourism and other agricultural industries, while helping to ensure an abundance of farm fresh and safe products reach New Yorkers’ dinner plates,” said Senator Larkin. “Providing additional support to these industries will help promote a strong and robust agricultural economy here in the Hudson Valley and throughout New York State.”

The agriculture portion of the budget proposal incorporates the Senate’s Planting Seeds legislative plan to continue supporting New York’s family farmers and boost the agriculture economy.

Restoring Funding Cuts:

Since 2011, Senate Republicans have succeeded in restoring more than $32 million in budget cuts for agriculture funding. The 2016-17 Executive Budget proposes to cut funding for agriculture programs in the largest single-year reduction in agriculture funding in five years. The Senate budget once again restores cuts to provide $10 million to help family farms.

Supporting Ag Research:

The Senate budget restores cuts to Cornell University's important agriculture-related research and study programs to keep it as the nation's premier center for agricultural learning and research. It also increases state funding for Cornell's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences to $4 million to meet the growing demand from students for agriculture and veterinary instruction programs. Increasing support for these education programs will help hold the line on rising college costs and student debt.

Protecting Food and Human Health:

The Senate budget provides an additional $500,000 to address threats to food safety, like Salmonella Dublin, a virus that affects dairy cows and has sickened humans who drink raw milk. The proposal also supports programs to detect and prevent the spread of other diseases in plants and animals such as avian disease ("bird flu"), Cornell's research into the recent honeybee die-off, which is critical to crop pollination, and expand programs that encourage farmers to reduce pesticide use. The budget also supports the replacement of aging and outdated lab facilities.

An additional $850,000 is also provided for Cornell's efforts that stop the spread of wildlife rabies from Canada and across New York State, and to provide reimbursement to local public health services for costly human post-exposure rabies preventive treatments.

Encouraging Innovation and Supporting Agriculture Education:

The Senate's budget proposal:

- Restores budget funding for a third round of Beginning Farmer grants, created as part of the Senate's 2014 Young Farmers initiative to encourage interest in agriculture and help protect the future of family farming;
- Increases funding for regional cooperative extensions;
- Increases investment in FarmNet, which provides services and assistance to farmers, including business and farm transition planning;
- Extends the Beginning Farmer Student Loan Forgiveness Program with an additional $50,000 to include students who are pursuing degrees in agriculture education;
- Provides $558,000 in additional support for the high-school based FFA programs (formerly known as "Future Farmers of America");
- Provides $200,000 to create a new North Country Ag Academy; and
- Provides $500,000 to establish an agriculture management program at SUNY's Canton College, which can serve as a lower-cost alternative to four-year agriculture degree programs.

HELP FOR NEW YORK'S SENIORS

"It is important to pursue policies and enact legislation that are geared to making New York State a more affordable place for seniors to live and a more desirable location for New Yorkers and others to retire," said Senator Larkin.

Savings on Retirement Income:

The Senate Majority's budget proposal includes new income tax relief to help more seniors save money and choose to stay in New York during retirement. The tax cut would provide the first increase to the exempt amount of private pensions and retirement income since 1981, saving approximately $275 million annually when fully phased in.

For 35 years, seniors have been able to claim the first $20,000 of pension or retirement income as exempt income. The Senate Majority's proposal increases that exempt amount to $27,000 in 2017, $34,000 in 2018, and $40,000 in 2019. This would provide tax relief to more than 377,000 seniors and, in the first year alone, would save each an average of $361.

Elder Abuse:

The Senate builds upon its longstanding commitment to protecting vulnerable senior citizens by providing $1.5 million to support elder abuse awareness, screening, and reporting initiatives.

ETHICS

"New Yorkers deserve the most open, accountable and responsive government possible," said Senator Larkin. "That's why it was important for the State Senate to take the lead and pass common sense government reforms such as term limits for legislative leaders as well as stripping pensions from corrupt public officials convicted of a felony related to his or her position."

Last year, the Senate approved a Constitutional amendment to strip the pensions from corrupt public officials convicted of a felony related to his or her position. The Assembly has not yet acted on this legislation, and the Senate budget proposal again includes pension forfeiture in order to hold elected officials accountable.

Term Limits for Legislative Leaders:

The Senate budget advances a proposal approved this year by the Senate (S2722B), sponsored by Senator Joseph Griffo (R-C-I, Rome), that would set into law eight-year term limits for leadership positions in the Senate and Assembly. This bill is consistent with what is already in place in Senate rules and also limits the number of years a legislator can serve as a committee chair or party leader.
