“Having quality infrastructure in place in the city’s downtown area will be a boon for further investment and growth. The former Key Bank building is situated in an area that is already undergoing an incredible transformation, and the revitalized space will be an attractive location for new businesses to establish roots. The state funding announced today through the RESTORE NY program will enhance these efforts. The Jamestown community has done an incredible job charting a course for an economic renaissance, maximizing existing resources to foster job growth through tourism and other activity,” said Senator Young.
