This timely and important public safety and emergency response grant should make a great difference to local emergency response teams.

Albany, N.Y., March 29—State Senator Tom O'Mara (R,C,I-Big Flats) said today that regional counties are among counties statewide that have been selected to share $45 million in state funding to help enhance and support local emergency communications systems.

“This timely and important public safety and emergency response grant should make a great difference to local emergency response teams,” said O’Mara. “Emergency preparedness, response and recovery are fundamental government responsibilities.”

Counties throughout New York State are being awarded a total of $45 million to undertake infrastructure, equipment and technology upgrades. The assistance is part of the latest round of funding through the Statewide Interoperable Communications Grant program, a competitive grant program supporting regional communications partnerships throughout New York. The state Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services administers the program. To date, the state has awarded $275 million for interoperable radio communications and emergency services dispatching services. Participation in the program has more than doubled since 2010 when the program was established.

O’Mara said that the counties he represents as part of New York’s 58th Senate District are receiving the following awards:

- > Chemung County, $566,034;
- > Schuyler County, $398,500;
- > Steuben County, $862,857;
- > Tompkins County, $738,565; and
- > Yates County, $355,205.
