“In recent years, extreme weather events have become more and more frequent in our region, posing new and increased risks to homeowners and businesses. I am pleased that these loans have been made available to the communities I represent and thank the federal representatives for recognizing the need for additional resources to help upstate communities rebuild after the flash flooding last year,” Senator Pam Helming said.

SBA loans can help eligible homeowners, renters, businesses and others who need financial support following emergencies or weather-related disasters. The following groups may be eligible for help from SBA for the following:
