Celebrating community partnership and honoring our hardworking professionals in education

On Thursday, April 19, 2018, I was proud to host the Fourth Annual Education Leadership Breakfast alongside Healthfirst at Antun's. Over 250 individuals, including school administrators and teachers, gathered to network with colleagues and meet with community leaders over breakfast. I thank George Hulse and the entire Healthfirst team for putting tremendous effort and resources into making the breakfast a reality. We were pleased to present special honors to several outstanding principals, assistant principals, teachers, and parent coordinators from our local schools. Because of the men and women who work tirelessly to make positive impacts on the lives of our youth, I am proud to be a voice for our educators and students in Albany.
