

I had the privilege of meeting with Frank yesterday as he walked through Albany, midway through his journey, and spent some time skyping with students across the state. I also had the honor of introducing Frank on the Senate floor before he began the second half of his journey.

It is important to remember that the focus of Frank's life's work is the pain, confusion, and difficulties facing our veterans as they try to re-integrate into a post-combat life. We honor them for their service but we need to remember them for their pain. Heroes like Frank Romeo remind us of that.

Find out more about what Frank is doing at www.walkwithfrank.org