

NEW YORK STATE SENATOR

Velmanette Montgomery

Senator Montgomery and Assemblywoman Jaffee urge the Governor's immediate consideration of their legislation to reform the State Central Register (S6427A/A8060)

VELMANETTE MONTGOMERY September 2, 2019

| ISSUE: CRIMINAL JUSTICE REFORM, NEW YORK'S STATEWIDE CENTRAL REGISTER OF CHILD ABUSE AND MALTREATMENT, NYS SENATE CHILDREN AND FAMILIES COMMITTEE, BEING POOR IS NOT A CRIME, THE NEW JANE CROW

| COMMITTEE: CHILDREN AND FAMILIES

State Senator Velmanette Montgomery, Chair of the Senate Children and Families Committee and Assemblywoman Ellen Jaffee, Chair of the Assembly Standing Committee on Children and Families wrote to Governor Andrew Cuomo request his immediate consideration of their State Central Register (SCR) bill to increase the standard of proof for unfounded and indicated reports of neglect and the admissibility of reports of cases on neglect.

In their joint letter, the Senator and Assemblywoman note:

This legislation makes a differentiation between child neglect and child abuse. It also increases the standard regarding evidence for child neglect, which will ultimately relieve individuals from the prospect of being persecuted for the "crime" of being poor.

Our bill would ultimately reduce the harsh and disproportionate consequences of having an indicated case on the New York's Statewide Central Register of Child Abuse and Maltreatment. A shocking number of parents — over 47,000 thousand — are added to the SCR every year for child neglect. Most of these parents remain on this list for up to 28 years, are barred from numerous jobs as well as participating in activities at their children's schools. The vast majority of the jobs that affect parents on the SCR are jobs most often performed by women, often-single heads of households, and people of color.

According to The New York Times in their story headlined, The Child Abuse Charge Was Dismissed. But It Can Still Cost You a Job, “In New York, it is especially easy to get on the database and arduous to be removed, amounting to a blacklist for many jobs, lawyers and parents said.” Additionally, WNYC reported on June 12, 2019, “There is widespread agreement that a system meant to help children is actually hurting some families by blocking job opportunities.”

This bill has support from the Legislature, passing in both houses overwhelmingly.

Additionally, thousands of constituents included those effected by the current State Central Register statute have contacted our offices in support of this legislation across the state. This bill also has a groundswell of support from advocacy groups and attorneys across the state
