

NEW YORK STATE SENATOR

Toby Ann Stavisky

Senator Toby Stavisky Praises The Senate's Passage Of Her Bill, To Help Reduce Opioid Abuse And Addiction Among New Yorkers

TOBY ANN STAVISKY February 14, 2020

| ISSUE: NEW YORK SENATOR TOBY ANN STAVISKY, HIGHER EDUCATION COMMITTEE, COMBATTING OPIOID ADDICTION, HEROIN & OPIOID ABUSE

The new legislation requires physical and mental health professionals to complete training on signs of substance abuse, as part of their already existing continuing education requirements. These professionals deal with patients managing various degrees of pain, both internal and external. Training them on the warning signs of dependency and addiction will help identify possible problems before they happen, or before it's too late.

The opioid crisis is an evolving nationwide epidemic that claimed nearly 3,300 lives in New York alone in 2018. Medical costs associated with overdoses and other treatments have placed a significant burden on the state. Educating those who work regularly with high risk individuals will cut down on that spending, saving millions of tax dollars.

The two hour training program will be required for nurses, psychologists, mental health counselors, marriage and family therapists, physical therapists, occupational therapists and more.

The bill, co-sponsored by Senator Anna Kaplan, passed the Senate 61-0.

RELATED LEGISLATION

2019-S7132

- Introduced
- - In Committee Assembly
 - In Committee Senate
- - On Floor Calendar Assembly
 - On Floor Calendar Senate
- - Passed Assembly
 - Passed Senate
- Delivered to Governor
- Signed By Governor
-

Relates to requiring opioid training for medical professionals to reduce patient opioid abuse and reliance

January 07, 2020

In Assembly Committee

Sponsored by Toby Ann Stavisky

Do you support this bill?
