Kaminsky Grills Realtors & Realty Company Supervisors on LI Housing Discrimination Practices at Legislative Hearing

TODD KAMINSKY September 18, 2020

(Rockville Centre, New York) — Yesterday, Senator Todd Kaminsky, participated in a joint legislative hearing focused on examining the illegal and unequal treatment of homebuyers on Long Island, and the legislative response to combat discrimination. During the questioning period, Senator Kaminsky grilled a Long Island real estate agent defending his statements, caught on video as part of a Newsday investigation, of telling a prospective homebuyer that “Hispanics had taken over the neighborhood” when discussing a Long Island community.

Upon the agents attempt to justify his comments as a positive descriptor and explain his position that his words were intended to mean that the community was “on the rise”, Senator Kaminsky took the opportunity to eviscerate the argument with the following statement:

“On behalf of people with brains everywhere, I want to let you know how ridiculous that sounds,” said Senator Kaminsky. “When someone says ‘The Jews took over a community, or X [ethnic group] took over a community’ it’s not meant in a positive way, you know that.”

The hearing, which included the questioning of realtors, brokers and supervisors of realty companies, including that of RE/MAX and Douglas Ellison, was meant to give individuals who did not appear during the first hearing in December 2019 the chance to testify and provide information regarding housing discrimination on Long Island. The testimonials provided included an array of finger-pointing tactics and lack of accountability that signals a need for strong legislative action and government oversight to regulate the real estate industry on Long Island.

After the Joint Hearing on Housing Discrimination Practices on Long Island, Senator Kaminsky commented:

“It is clear the real estate industry is unwilling to take responsibility for the housing discrimination crisis they created on Long Island,” said Senator Todd Kaminsky. “We deserve more than finger pointing. We must take action and establish strong government oversight. Our diversity is our greatest strength and all families deserve equal access to all Long Island neighborhoods.”
