Senator Mattera: Fighting For Middle Class Tax Relief

| ISSUE: MIDDLE CLASS TAX CUT, SENATE REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE, TAX RELIEF

The graphic features a dark blue background with a faint map of New York State. On the left, the text "Fight to save the Middle Class!" is written in large, bold, green letters. Below this, the New York State seal is positioned to the left of the word "RESET" in large white letters, followed by "NEW YORK STATE" in smaller white letters. At the bottom, the slogan "RESTART. RETHINK. RENEW." is written in green. On the right side, there are several small, overlapping images: a worker in a warehouse, hands typing on a keyboard, a person working at a desk, a man and woman looking at a laptop, a woman in a suit, and a construction worker in a hard hat.

As the New York State Budget picture begins to emerge, Senator Mario Mattera (2nd Senate District) recently joined with Senate Republican Leader Rob Ortt and members of the Senate Republican Conference to send a letter to Senate Majority Leader Andrea Stewart-Cousins urging her and the Democratic Conference to reject a proposed tax hike on middle-class New Yorkers. After years of phasing in the historic, Senate Republican-authored middle-class tax cut -- which has delivered hundreds of millions of dollars in relief to millions of taxpayers since its enactment -- Governor Cuomo last week reversed course in his Executive Budget address with a plan to balance the multi-billion dollar deficit on the backs of hardworking New Yorkers.

The historic middle-class tax cut, which was enacted with strong bipartisan support, took effect in 2018. One of the largest tax cuts in state history, the Senate Republican-authored plan would reduce middle-class tax rates by 20 percent and provide $4.2 million in annual savings for more than six million middle-class taxpayers and small businesses when fully phased in. Governor Cuomo's current budget plan includes a misguided proposal to delay the middle-class tax cuts this year.

“As our residents continue to work together to overcome the COVID-19 crisis, our state should be doing all it can to help them by providing them with much-needed tax relief. Instead, the recently introduced budget proposal would delay the middle-class tax cut. I hope my colleagues in the Democrat Conference will consider joining us as we fight to protect our hardworking taxpayers. New Yorkers from every single corner of our state have been doing more with less throughout this past year and they deserve to know that their state hears their need for economic relief,” stated Senator Mattera.

“New York has become the tax capital of the nation under one-party rule. Despite the Governor's best efforts to collect revenue by soaking hardworking New Yorkers, we believe it is in the best interest of all of our constituents to reject these unfair tax hikes. In the middle of a pandemic that has taken so much from so many of us, it is important now more than ever not to hurt our hardworking middle-class. The Senate Republicans will unequivocally reject any budget that includes more taxes on New York families. We are asking the Senate Democrats to join us in making that commitment, and work with us to make New York more affordable,” said Senate Republican Leader Ortt.

“It's outrageous that Governor Cuomo calls on middle-class taxpayers to give up long-overdue tax relief, that was negotiated and bargained for by Senate Republicans three years ago in a package to reduce taxes in New York State, so that he can go ahead and increase state spending by billions of dollars. This move shows just how committed the governor is to not helping the middle-class of New York State,” said Senator Tom O'Mara, ranking member of the Senate Finance Committee.

Governor Cuomo's plan to raise taxes on the already-overstressed and rapidly-shrinking New York middle-class comes as the state annually continues to rank among the worst of all 50 states in overall tax climate. New York State also consistently leads all 50 states in outmigration precisely because of its taxing problem.

The letter and announcement comes after Senate Republicans earlier this month unveiled their bold vision to Reset New York. Earlier this week, Senate Majority Leader Stewart-Cousins herself said we have an "opportunity to reset," a clear indication that New York is on the wrong path with regards to tax policy in the state.
