Albany, NY - Today, the Senate Majority passed its one-house budget resolution for FY 2021-22 (Senate Resolution No. 504). This budget invests in a brighter, more equitable future for New York State by fully funding essential services and putting more money in the pockets of working and middle-class families. Locally, the one-house budget provides much-needed support to get the 55th District through the COVID-19 pandemic and bolster education, economic development, healthcare access, and criminal justice reform.

"The need for investment in our communities is greater than ever, and the Senate's proposed budget brings much-needed funding to the 55th District," stated Senator Samra Brouk. "Within this resolution are some incredible wins for the Rochester region. I promised that I would be a strong and unifying voice in Albany, and I insisted that our residents' voices be at the table when these decisions were being made. And today, with this resolution, I'm proud to claim that the Senate has delivered more to our district than has been delivered in many, many years. From meaningful investment in our schools, to retaining local control of the management of the Erie Canal, to historic funding for our Police Accountability Board, this is the commitment that our region needs to recover from this pandemic and ensure a brighter future."
