“Kayla and the entire McKeon family embody the best of Central New York and I know they will proudly represent the Empire State at the Special Olympics USA Games in 2022,” said Senator Mannion. “There is no finer organization in the state than Special Olympics New York. I am proud to partner with Special Olympics New York to promote inclusion and empower our young people – with and without disabilities - to end stereotypes through Unified Sports.”

“Competing at the national level is a distinguished honor we are only able to offer to a fraction of our deserving athletes. USA Games competitors are the best of the best and we’re proud to count Kayla among them,” said Special Olympics New York President & CEO Stacey Hengsterman. “We are thrilled to share this magical moment with Senator Mannion, who is a true champion for people with disabilities. Thanks to he and his colleagues in the Legislature, we can continue to grow the Special Olympics New York Unified Sports program in schools across the state.”

Kayla has been a Special Olympics New York athlete since the age of 13. She competes in track and field, softball, bowling, soccer, bocce, floor hockey and basketball. Kayla participated in Special Olympics World Games in Athens in 2011, where she won silver and bronze medals.

Kayla is also the first-ever registered lobbyist with Down syndrome. She serves as the Manager of Grassroots Advocacy with the National Down Syndrome Society. Her legislative successes include major revisions to the federal Achieving a Better Life Experience (ABLE) Act.

Senator Mannion also announced $150,000 in state funding to help expand Special Olympics New York's Unified Champion Schools program. The program uses sports as a catalyst to provide opportunities for students with and without intellectual disabilities to compete alongside one another. Working in partnership with the New York State Public High School Athletic Association, the program blends educational-based programming and high school athletics to promote inclusiveness, inspire youth leadership and encourage whole school engagement.

There are approximately 250 Unified Champion Schools across the state supporting more than 8,000 student athletes who lead their school's unified activities.
