In remarks from the floor of the Senate, Senator Anna M. Kaplan said “Strong support for Israel is an issue that is deeply personal for me, and that’s why I’m proud not only to be the author of this resolution today, but also to be hosting a celebration in honor of Israel’s Independence Day here in the State Capitol.

As many of you know, I came to this country as a refugee when I was 13 years old. My parents weren’t able to come with me, and by the time they were able to flee Iran, nations around the world had turned their backs on Jewish refugees like us.

As one nation after another denied their entry, Israel was the only place that would allow them to seek refuge, and they opened their arms to my parents, giving them a safe place to call home until they were finally able to reunite with me and my siblings in this country.

Their story is not unique. Israel has been a beacon for Jewish people around the world since its inception. As Israel faces new challenges, and as antisemitism and global instability once again threatens the safety of Jewish people worldwide, it has never been more important for us all to stand up and speak out in the strongest of terms in support of Israel.

Supporting Israel isn’t a partisan issue. At a time when the stakes really couldn’t be higher, it’s a common purpose around which we can all unite.”
