

NEW YORK STATE SENATOR

John W. Mannion

Senator John W. Mannion Strengthens Bail Laws, Secures First-ever Fully Funded Foundation Aid for Schools, Saves the Free School Meals Program, Provides Pre-k Expansion, Third Consecutive Cost-of-Living Adjustment for DSPs, and Child Tax Credit Expansion

JOHN W. MANNION May 2, 2023

ALBANY, NY – Senator John W. Mannion (D-Geddes) today announced the passage of the 2023-2024 New York State Budget and highlighted new state investments that will bolster public safety, the economy, and provide help to families in Central New York.

Senator Mannion secured in the state budget strengthened bail laws that give greater discretion to judges to remand or set bail, the first-ever fully funded Foundation Aid for schools, a continuation of the free school meals program, a further expansion of universal prekindergarten, the third consecutive cost-of-living-adjustment for DSPs and other care industry professionals, a major expansion of the state's child tax credit, and millions of dollars to support the arts in Upstate New York.

“I left a very rewarding career in teaching and ran for office because my hometown and all of Central New York's families, businesses, and schools need to get a fair share from Albany, and this budget delivers. I've strengthened public safety by giving judges the ability to remand and impose bail, fully funded our schools for the first time ever, and saved the free school meals program - which may be the most consequential aspect of the entire spending plan. I'm proud to support an expansion of affordable child care, better wages for DSPs and others in the care industry, as well as securing important funding for local initiatives like MACNY's workforce training program that is preparing us for the high tech jobs that are coming to Central New York."

Additional budget priorities for Senator Mannion in the final agreement include $300M for infrastructure related to semiconductor manufacturing, $1.75M for MACNY workforce training programs, $300K for the Town of Oswego's emergency services, and $150K for Special Olympics New York.

Senator Mannion is not supportive of everything in the budget. He adamantly opposes the expansion of charter schools and believes the timeline to transition to electrification is too accelerated and is deeply concerned that, while well intended, current energy policy will significantly shift costs to consumers, New York based manufacturers and small businesses.

Senator Mannion said, “I believe in our public schools because as a teacher and parent, I know the value of these bedrock community institutions and how they give young people the best chance to succeed in their education and in life. I do not support expanding charter schools because they drain resources from public school kids while playing by a completely different set of rules that lack transparency and accountability.”

Senator Mannion continued, “I fully support the goal of transitioning from fossil fuels but we must not sacrifice affordability and reliability for speed. I believe the aggressive timeline for the state’s climate goals is overly ambitious and does not match the realities in many parts of New York State. People need access to propane and natural gas to keep warm through Central New York winters, and banning gas stoves and gas heating, even if only in new buildings, will drive up costs during a housing crisis. We have much more work to do on energy policy, including expanding green hydrogen, hydropower, and utilizing clean and safe nuclear power.”
