What are you Thankful for?

Being thankful is to be grateful for the things we have in life: our family, friends, and all the people that are always there for us. Additionally, it means that you should love the things you have while you have them and not be greedy by wanting more. That is what I think it means to be grateful.

I am thankful for my family because no matter what, they will always be there supporting, guiding and loving me. Another reason I am thankful for my family is because they will be with me throughout my life to help me make choices that are sometimes difficult. Even when I make choices that they aren't pleased with, they will still be there to forgive me, unlike others. They will always love me unconditionally, be there for me, and help me make choices throughout my life. This is why I am thankful for my family.

Another thing I am thankful for is shelter; there are many people in our community and the world who aren't so lucky to have a safe home to return to every night. My home keeps me warm, dry and safe during hard times. It also provides somewhere to play and to make memories in. Our home also provides our basic needs because we need it to survive. This is why I am grateful for my home.

The last thing I am thankful for is our first responders. They keep us safe from any danger that is happening worldwide. They are our heroes because they risk their lives to save us in ways we can't imagine. Many people in my family are first responders and I am so thankful for their service. This is why I am thankful for our first responders.

In conclusion I will always be thankful for our first responders, our shelter and family because they are what matter the most to me. This is why I am so very thankful for them.
