

Friends and families, each and every day.

All those smiles, do they mean something?

We, as one, are all thankful for them, and what I mean by them, I mean friends, family, and loved ones.

We, as one, are thankful for protectors and guardians of evil forces that keep us safe from danger.

We, as one, are thankful for our resources that we need each and every day, for centuries and generations.

We, as one, are thankful that every human being controls their own path, only their future that they decide on the path only they can choose.

We, as one, are thankful for everyone that protects us, the ones that help us when we fall down, the ones who save us, the ones who we see in our everyday lives.

They are the ones we are thankful for.

By : River Wang

Ms. Almanzar's fourth grade class

Pasadena Elementary School

Plainview NY