

Thanksgiving to me is most important to the big man upstairs, God. God saved my life and he is who created me in the first place, so what I'm truly and would always be thankful for is the gift of life. In the hardest times you may think or have the thought, "why me?" Why do I have to go through the struggles I am facing but I think of it as I'm lucky to feel the feeling of sadness, anger, loneliness and of course happiness. Some babies die at birth and would never experience those feelings that I do on a daily basis. God gave me this gift and when my time is done I would be saved by Jesus for giving my life to him. God gave me the people that I love and hold dear to.

My family built me up to be a young man and teaches me morals and everything I know today. Even if you're mad at a loved one or get upset and the famous line, "YOU DON'T KNOW WHAT I'M GOING THROUGH!" They just know what is best for you and you need to understand that no one is a mistake and god gave you a plan. There are also people that may not have a family if they lost them, or even the family gave them up but your parents never hate you but they are just trying to give you a better life. So when I eat with a whole table of my family I just believe and think to myself how much my family gave to me or any other sibling or cousin. But even if you have a loved one that is not your blood doesn't mean they have any less impact.

Friends are something that everyone should have. If there is someone in school alone and asking to be their friend could make a big difference. You can talk to friends if you don't want to tell your family because you don't believe they will understand. Friends in general are another cornerstone in life and they will always be there for you when you think you're alone in this world. Communicating with other people can also open your mind to kindness and a helping from another human being just like you. I do get in fights with my friends but at the end we are brother and sisters and I wouldn't do anything to wrong them. I would stick up for my friends and I know they would do the same for me. We know if you need a wingman you have your bro for that.

We all have experienced love somewhat in life even if it was little. Your mother loves your father and most importantly Jesus. The gift of love in life is one of the best feelings a human can experience and we couldn't do this without god so that is why I'm thankful for the gift of life.
