

What are you thankful for?

This year I'm thankful for my mother, and father. My parents have always been there for me, helping me do exceptionally well in academics, hobbies, and other day-to-day activities. They have both always been there for me during my highest and lowest points. Both of them are always at my side whenever I need them. I will always be eternally grateful for both of them.

Starting off with my mother, I'm extremely thankful for her being by my side throughout my plethora of life experiences. She has helped me gain future endeavors, and always has pushed me to do my best, even if I make mistakes at times, which I know I do. As an adult, she moved here to start a better life for both herself, and my family. When I was younger, she always would read to me, to educate me, to help me form words. I will ever be so grateful, as it has helped me develop such a mindset, whereas I'm capable of exceeding in studies. In doing so, she has pushed me to expectations unknown. I will always be grateful for her push in education towards me. More importantly, she has done so much for me in my personal life as well. I never seemed to like any certain hobby, but with this she tried so hard until the puzzles finally fit. I thank her for driving me to those tennis lessons every Sunday. It was one of my favorite parts of the weekend, and then I began to swim. Swimming for me is like a meditation session, I can take all of that pressure off of my chest while I swim, and I thank her for signing me up when I was too stubborn to even consider going to those lessons. Honestly without my mother, I know that I wouldn't be able to do half of the things that I know now.

Moving on to my father, who has got me into so many different things, such as entertainment, games, science, space, and more. My dad has always been there for me, always interested me in the newest novel on science, or the newest documentary. Whenever he's not talking about the newest technology, or the newest released item, he's watching sports. Now, this is a small piece of him that has rubbed off on me, if he's watching I'll gladly sit and watch with him if I'm interested in that sport. I want to thank him for explaining math to me, when I have no idea what I'm doing, as well as history. Thank you, for always being there for me.

Overall I'm extremely grateful for both my mom and my father. I will always be eternally thankful for them being there for me from start to finish. This is why I'm thankful for both of them.
