3 Things I Am Thankful For

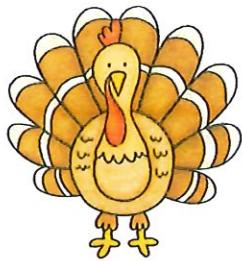

by Alyssa Izsak

In the year 1620, the Pilgrims and the Wampanoag celebrated their first harvest by having a big feast. In 1863 Abraham Lincoln made Thanksgiving an official holiday for people to celebrate. I celebrate the holiday of Thanksgiving by having a meal with my family. On Thanksgiving I am thankful for my family, my school and nature.

I am thankful for my family. My mom is very loving. She supports me when I am feeling sad and helps me calm down by talking to me. She also pays attention to me when I tell her things that I think are important. My dad is very funny. He adds a sense of humor to my family and makes difficult things easier by making jokes. He also helps me with my homework if I need help. My grandma is very kind. She entertains me when I'm bored by doing activities with me. She also teaches me to crochet a circle.

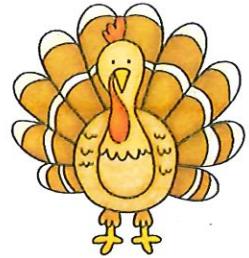

I am also thankful for my school Mazel Day School. I am thankful for my education. I am learning so much from my teachers Morah Michelle and Morah Rachel. Morah Michelle is my general studies teacher and I am learning so many subjects at a time! Morah Rachel is my Judacs studies teacher and I love Judacs because I get to learn parsha. I am also thankful for my friends. I am grateful for my friend Rebecca because we went to camp together in the summer. I appreciate my friend Shayna for that one time we went to the movies together. That is why I am thankful for my school.

I am thankful for nature. I am thankful for trees because they give us oxygen that helps us survive. I am also grateful for waterfalls because they provide an amazing sight for us to look at. I appreciate flowers because I can make bouquets for my mom on Mother's day. I am grateful for lakes and rivers because they provide water for us to drink. These are some reasons why I am thankful for nature.

Over four centuries ago, the Wampanoag and the Pilgrims had a feast because they had their first harvest. Over 150 years ago President Abraham Lincoln made Thanksgiving an official holiday for people to celebrate. I celebrate Thanksgiving by having a feast with my family. My family, school and nature are just a few blessings that I have in my life.
