

Don't Be Dead
By Spencer Coombs

I am grateful for my life because, without it, I wouldn't be able to do anything. Without my life, I would be dead. The opposite of life is death, and if I don't have life, then I must have the opposite, which is death, but I'm not dead, so that must mean I'm alive. If I did not have my life, I would not be able to do anything like playing games or even writing this because I would be dead if I did not have my life, which I clearly have. Without my life, I would not be able to write this for you to read, BUT if you can read this, that must mean that you're also alive. Therefore, you should also be grateful for your life. Do not waste your life because, without it, you're nothing but a dead person.
