Thanksgiving Day Celebration Essay

Autumn has already arrived, and Thanksgiving is approaching. During this time, I have had moments to reflect on and appreciate my qualities. Two of the qualities I am most thankful for are my love & ability to draw and my relationships. My love to draw gives me a fun hobby and opens new opportunities for me, while my relationships give me people to interact with and make me feel loved.

The ability to draw has been extremely beneficial over the past few years. It has given me an enjoyable past-time. My friend taught me the basics in third grade, and I have been drawing in my free time ever since. Even when I am bored, I impulsively start doodling on any available piece of paper. It has helped me overcome boredom for as long as I can remember. It has also opened opportunities along the way. My teachers, family, and friends have asked me to draw numerous things for decorative purposes, gifts, projects, posters, etc. There are also people who would pay for art, which could help me make additional money in the future.

My relationships have also helped me enjoy life more. Though I do not have many friends, the ones I do have make things a lot more fun. My relationship with my siblings and parents is also good, so that leads to more happy memories in my life. I am so grateful to have people in my life who support, love, and care about me. These relationships also lead to funny, happy, and memorable moments I would not have otherwise.

My love to draw has made more things possible for me, aswell as an enjoyable hobby, while my relationships have improved my quality of life. These traits have influenced me in more ways than one, and I am incredibly grateful for them. After many years, I do not know what my life would be like without these qualities.
