THANKSGIVING ESSAY

This upcoming thanksgiving holiday has left me, Clarence Romero, to explain why I am thankful for some of my qualities. The entire point of thanksgiving is to state what you are thankful for and why. I, Clarence Romero, will explain why I am thankful for my focus and creativity in this essay.

I am thankful for my focus because it has helped me to carry out certain tasks. Even though I procrastinate on every single assignment I am told to complete, when I decide to start them, I can finish them in one go. I am especially thankful for this quality because I can learn the things that I want to learn and do the things that I actually want to do with more determination than is normal for me. For example, I recently decided that I would learn to knit. I learned the long tail cast on with an hour and once I have the time, I will start learning the continental, German, knit stitch method. This is a perfect example of my focus because I refused to do anything for the one hour even though I started it at 5 am when I had still been up from last night and had not eaten anything the past day.

My creativity is a quality I am very thankful for. The reason behind this being the fact that it makes the accomplishment of more artistic goals easier to come by. When I was younger, I had always liked drawing and used to take classes, it has been a hobby of mine all my life and I have still been taking classes which I have decided to count as one of my extracurricular's for college.

I Clarence Romero have explained why I am thankful for my qualities of focus and creativity. My focus has helped me to pursue things that interest me, and my creativity has helped me to accomplish many things and advance in the creation of art.
