

Thanksgiving Essay

A person's qualities can develop their point of view on the world. Qualities differentiate people and make them unique in their own way. Two qualities of mine that I feel separates and makes me unique are my sense of communication and my creativity. I am thankful for these qualities because they create positive impacts on my life and my view of the world and life.

My way of communication is a quality of mine that I am thankful for very much. The way I communicate in negative situations allows me to maintain healthy relationships with others and resolve problems so that no negative feedback arises after the situation is resolved. Communication is key to help get views across and let your voice be heard. When I was younger, I used to always lie to my parents so as I got older there was not a lot of trust built between us, but as I became more mature the trust gap filled as even if I knew the consequences would come with it I communicated through all problems with them even if I was at fault. My communication led to them being able to trust me more and trust that I would not hide things from them. I am very thankful that my communication allowed me to build that trust with my family.

My creativity is another quality of mine that I am thankful for. My creativity allows me to create unique ideas to display. Thinking creatively is another creative aspect of my personality. To be able to think creatively allows me to take a leadership role in many different things and situations. For example, if I were put in a group to construct a project I would immediately start thinking of ideas and presenting them to the group which allows me to be seen as somebody who is a quick thinker with unique ideas. I am very thankful that my creativeness adds on many positive attributes to my personality.

Qualities of a person can allow them to develop their own unique personality and viewpoint of the world. Qualities help differentiate people and make them unique. Two of my qualities that I was thankful for were my creativity and way of communication. My qualities give my personality many positive aspects.
