Everybody has their own good and negative traits. Traits are qualities that make them unique. Sometimes I struggle with identifying my good traits. The traits that I found I'm thankful for are: cultural, smart, and funny.

First I'm gonna talk about my cultural side. I am Russian and patriotic. I'm thankful for Russian history, clothes, and food. Also I enjoy seeing the Russian culture, it is a big part of me.

I'm not only in tune with my culture I am also smart. Since I'm smart adults listen to me. My statements are acknowledged and considered. I also value education, I like to research topics I'm interested in (some being sail ships and the USSR).

Finally I'm going to discuss how funny I am. I'm thankful for this trait because this will make people like me. I remember one time in 2nd grade I reenacted a whole Mr. Bean scene of copying a test. It made nearby class mates laugh and it made me feel like like a comedian. I used to act like Mr. Bean all the time since he was funny.

Everybody has their own qualities. The ones I am thankful for in culture, smart and funny. Different qualities make the world different and a more interesting place.
