

Sheng Lee 11/14/23
Ms. Nicole Writing

I AM ME

Everybody is different and that's okay, being different makes you special. If everybody in the world were the same, everyone and everything would be dull and boring. Qualities make people unique, qualities are traits or descriptions of someone or something. Some qualities of mine that I am grateful for include my humor, athleticism, and indecisiveness.

I am grateful for my sense of humor. Having a good sense of humor, or being funny, allows me to connect with others. I can use my sense of humor to connect with others by making jokes, and understanding jokes too. Another reason I am thankful for my sense of humor because not everyone has a good sense of humor so I am lucky I can because it would be boring otherwise.

Another quality of mine I'm thankful for is my indecisiveness. Being indecisive may be treated as a bad trait, but I like it. I am grateful for it because it forces me to think about my actions and decisions before making them. If you don't think about your actions thoroughly can cause you to do things you'd regret or upset you. Another reason being indecisive is good is because it makes you accept input from others and use their advice.

A third quality I am grateful for is my athletic ability. One reason I am grateful for this is because it helps me in sports and games involving running. Other than using my athletic ability for sports I can use it to stay healthy. I enjoy running and my athletic ability allows me to have fun through running with my friends.

In conclusion, everyone is different and that's great. Being different makes every one unique and if everyone was the same the world would be dull and boring. I am grateful for my sense of humor, athletic ability, indecisiveness, and others. These are only some of my traits I appreciate, but everyone is full of their own good and bad qualities.