

Hi, my name is Robyn and I am from the Philippines. One of my hobbies is drawing. I have been drawing since I was around four or when I was able to hold a pencil. People often call me nice or sweet. I am thankful for my qualities because people oftentimes do not appreciate themselves and I think that people should look at their insecurities and grow from them.

One of the qualities that I am thankful for is that I am reflective. I like to think of other people and what they go through. When I do something kind or sweet I will make that a routine. When someone drops something I will help them pick it up. People go through things that people don't know about. People should always be kind to others since they don't know what they are going through, which is why I'm thankful for being kind to others and also being reflective of my actions.

A lot of people also think that I am easy going. When a change of plans happens, I will just let it be because I don't like forcing something to happen which I am thankful for. People often try to make something happen. I think that waiting for something to happen at the right time is better. This is just my opinion.

One other thing that people think about me is that I am intelligent. People think that because I don't give up on certain things that I am working on. Sometimes I will feel like I am not doing good enough. I am okay with me feeling that way because it is normal and everyone feels it at some point. I am grateful for myself whether I have a high grade or not as long as I am trying.

Ever since I was little I would remember myself always drawing pictures. My art wasn't really that good back then, but I learned from my mistakes in art and I tried new techniques. I am thankful for all my qualities like being intelligent , sweet, kind and reflective because it helps me be who I am today. Thank you for reading my essay.
