Hello, my name is Cora Egglefield. I am from Lewis, NY and that is where I currently reside. I enjoy playing Animal Crossing, playing with my cats, sleeping, etc. Three traits that I'm thankful for are being smart, funny, and positive. Continue reading to see why and how I'm these traits.

The first character trait I'm thankful for is being smart. One reason I think I'm smart is because I'm in English honors, I raise my hand and usually get correct answers, and, I get pretty good grades. I'm thankful for this trait because school is way easier and it's a good perk to have in a learning environment. The most important reason I'm thankful for being smart is being able to have a better future. With this, I can have a greater future and be more happy.

The second character trait I'm thankful for is being funny. I think I'm funny because my friends say I'm funny. Also, I make a lot of people laugh. I'm thankful for this trait because I'm able to make more friends when I am able to make them laugh. Another, or, final reason I'm thankful for being funny is to lighten the mood. When I'm able to lighten the mood it'll be less tense and I'll feel way more relaxed and at ease.

The third and final character trait I'm thankful for is being positive. I'm positive because I almost never give up. I always look at the bright side and I'm very optimistic. I'm thankful for this trait because when you're positive you feel happier for yourself and feel better. Also, apparently, being positive can give you lower rates of depression and pain!

This is why I'm thankful for these traits. I'm thankful I'll have a better future because I'm smart. I'm glad I am funny because I can make more friends. Also, I'm happy that I can be positive because I can feel better and have less pain. So, in conclusion, you should be thankful for everything and every opportunity you have.
