For this Thanksgiving I want to give thanks for many things and I want to eat turkey. For instance, I want to thank my family for giving what I have now. Another thing I want to thank is my friends for bringing me fun and getting rid of the loneliness. The last and final thing I want to thank is my teachers for giving me an education. Here is why I want to thank these people.

I want to thank my very important people, my family. They send me to school for an education and to make friends. They want me to have a better future so that I will not be as tired as them when they work. I know they yell at me for a reason because they want me to learn from mistakes and do better next time. That is what parents do for their kids.

Finally, I want to thank my helpful teachers and friends. They make me happy and make me less lonely. Even though they do not sit next to me in class I still have them in recess and after school. I even make nicknames for my friends, which is kind of rude but they do not mind. Every teacher is nice to their students and helps them with their problems by giving solutions. One time my 5th grade teacher told me not to be a teacher when I grow up. I think maybe it is all the stress, hard work, and effort they put into us to educate us.

In conclusion, I want to thank my family and every teacher for how much effort they put into us just to make our future brighter for us. I also want to thank my friends for helping me and having fun together. That is what I want to do for Thanksgiving this year, and eat turkey!
