

My Family is a Blessing!

I am thankful that I am blessed with an outstanding family. This sounds like what everyone would say. But, I am very lucky to have everyone in my family love me the way they do.

I am the youngest one in my family. Everyone treats me as if I am such a baby. That is great, but what really matters is how my Mom and Dad work really hard and lots of hours so that my sister and I can have a house with our own rooms. It is not very big, but we can ride our bikes in the small yard in the summer, and we can have little parties with our cousins in the yard. I hardly have time with my mom during the week because she works two jobs just so that we can go to Andalusia School. This is a special school for me because it teaches me about Islam. I am reminded every day to accept everyone and to be kind.

I am also very thankful that I have an older Sister. She can be annoying, but that is part of why I love her. It makes me miss her when we are apart. The best thing about her is that she sleeps with me when I am scared, and she takes care of me when I am sick.

Finally, my grandparents are a huge part of my family, and I thank God every day for them. My Gradpa makes sure I do my homework because my Mom works at night too. He explains what I do not know and makes sure I learn. My Grandma cooks any food I like, and she makes sure I have all I need when my parents are busy, and they are busy a lot.

It is true most people love their families and would be thankful for them. But I am blessed because I have great love from everyone in my family, so I am very grateful to my creator for my loving family.
