

What I am thankful this year is my new born nephew, because this is the first time that I became an aunt. There are many priorities that you have to do in becoming an aunt, your taking responsibility. I get to learn new things about baby's that I never new about before. I feel like I have a bond with my nephew. I am thankful for that, A baby is a blessing from god. I get to have responsibility and change his diaper. I get to take actions and experience what's it like to finally be a Aunte. What I learn from being a aunt is that some baby's like to have 4 bottles a day or more. I learn that baby unbiblical cord take time to fall off. This is what I love about when you became an aunt. You learn new facts and if one day you want to become a veterinarian, You will be good at it cause you have learn from the experience you have when becoming an aunt. I love that his birthday is on October 29th two day before mines. I am thankful that I'm not the only one left out when my family go out to work or parties. I have someone to teach new things. I am a role model to my nephews. I get to play with someone, watch Pokémon with him. Have a special bond with someone. Someone to wake me up when I'm sleeping. I get to have adventures and have good times with him. This is what I am thankful for this year my nephew.
