This year one of the most things I'm grateful is my dad. One reason I'm grateful of him is because he'll try his best to see use. Since my mom and dad are divorced it's hard to see him. Once a week and every other weekend I get to see him and that's not a lot of time. Every other holiday I go over for that day. For example last christmas my dad got my brother and I so this christmas i will stay with my mom. It's also hard to see my baby brother and sister how also live at my dads.

I'm also grateful for him because he is always there for me. Whenever I'm scared, happy,sad. When I was little there was a huge thunderstorm and I was little so I was terrified. That same night my dad came and slept on the floor just for me. When I was little I use to think my dad was indestructible. One day it raining and a lighting bolt hit our tree and and a branch came off and almost hit a kid. Don't ask me why a kid was outside in the pouring rain. But anyway let's get back to the story. So anyway he went out to get it out of the road and that branch looked pretty heavy.

For my last example when my brother, sister, my other brother, and me are sick at his house. He will stay home and take care. Every year a week before christmas i will get sick. It's a record but anyway. That year I was at my dad's that weekend and he did everything to make me feel better. With making jokes, giving me medicine, and more. This is why i am grateful for my dad this thanksgiving and all year round
